CELEBRATING 70 YEARS OF CARE

For 70 years, Hôpital Albert Schweitzer has been built and sustained through dedicated care, long-term partnership, and a deep commitment to serving families across the Artibonite Valley.

Today, more than 700 Haitian staff members support this work across the hospital and community.

Hôpital Albert Schweitzer: Care That Holds Communities Together

For families in the Artibonite Valley, Hôpital Albert Schweitzer is a trusted source of care. For 70 years, it has supported safe deliveries, lifesaving treatment for children, and ongoing care for patients across the region. Each year, 500k+ people rely on HAS for critical medical care. As access to healthcare and health education becomes increasingly limited across Haiti, families continue to turn to HAS. Amid ongoing crises, our doctors, nurses, community health workers, and support staff provide care with skill and compassion, continuing a commitment that has defined the hospital for seven decades. The strength of HAS lies in the resilience of the communities we serve and a longstanding belief that every patient deserves dignity and care.

HOSPITAL SERVICES AND ADMISSIONS

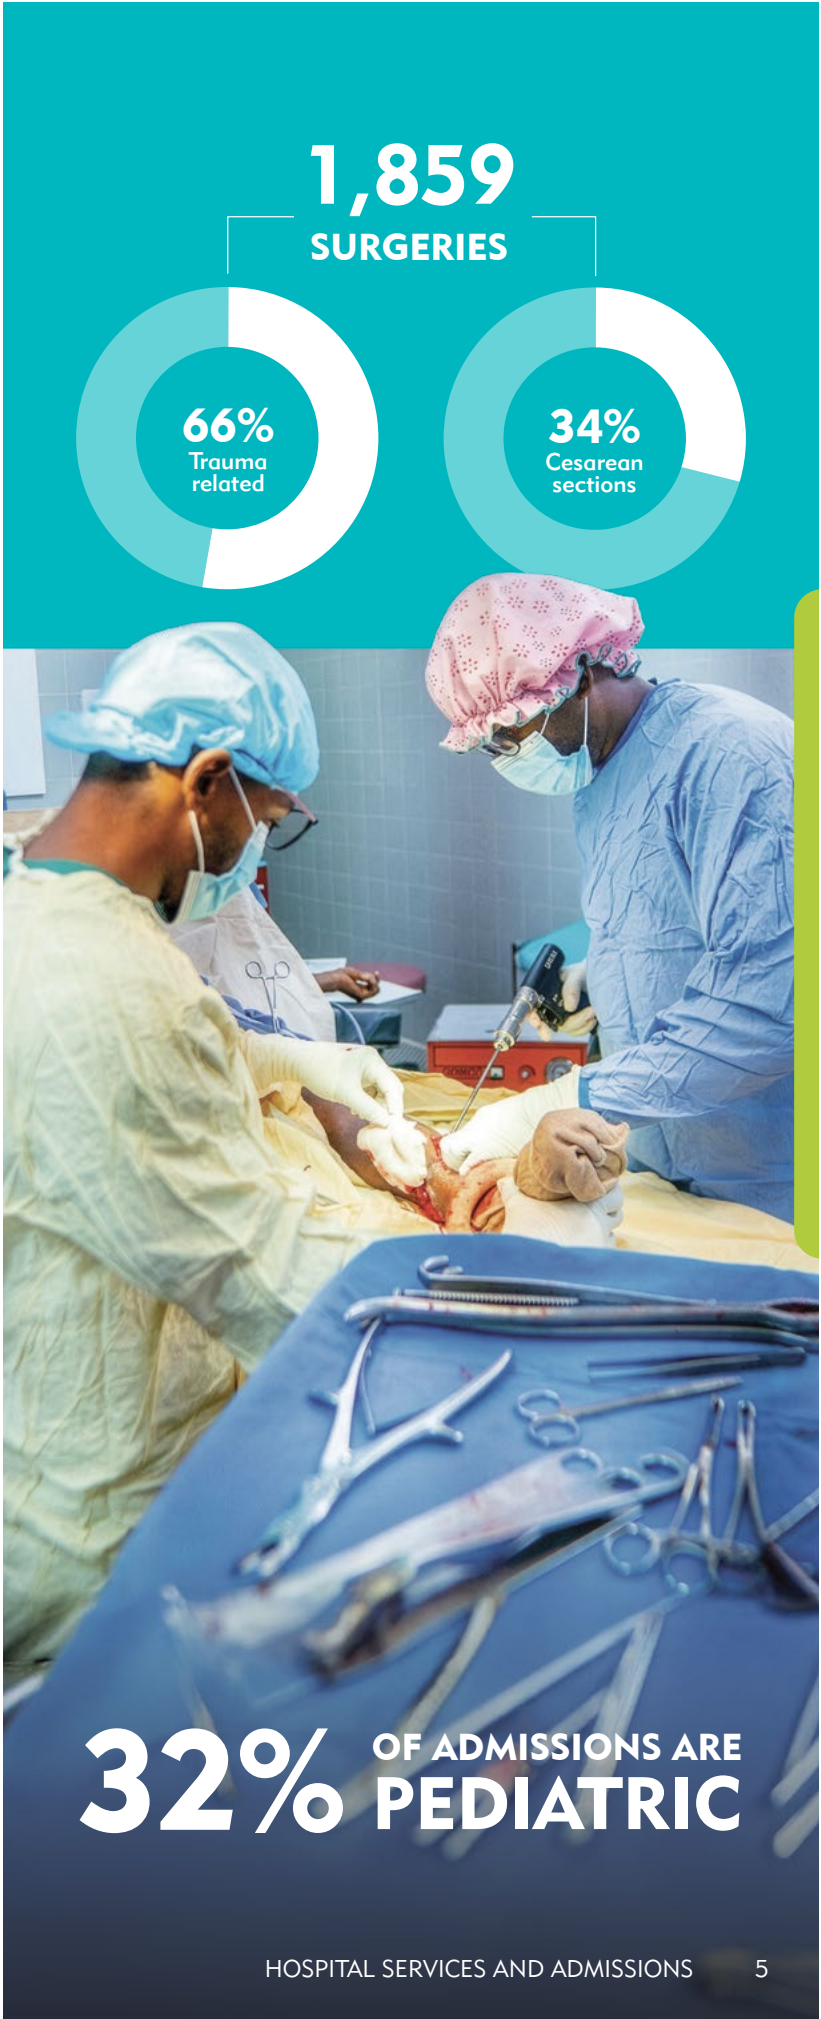

At its heart, Hôpital Albert Schweitzer is a place where lives are saved, and care never wavers.

For 70 years, families in the Artibonite region have turned to HAS for treatment of illnesses and injuries, critical surgeries, and ongoing support for chronic conditions. Every patient who walks through our doors is met with compassion, skill, and the assurance that our hospital team is fully committed to their well-being—no matter the challenge. Each encounter reflects our unwavering belief, sustained across generations, that every life is worth fighting for.

Supporting mothers and children has been central to HAS's work since its founding and remains essential to building a healthier future for the Artibonite Valley.

Through our maternal and child health programs, families receive safe delivery care, pediatric services, and family-centered support at every stage of early life. From prenatal visits to vaccinations and nutritional care, HAS works alongside mothers to ensure safe births, strong beginnings, and the opportunity for children to grow and thrive.

For newborns who require specialized or intensive care, HAS provides critical neonatal support during the most vulnerable moments of life. Our neonatal care team works closely with maternity and pediatric services to monitor and treat medically fragile infants and respond quickly to complications, ensuring continuity of care from birth onward. Seventy years on, our commitment to protecting families and caring for the next generation remains as strong as ever.

COMMUNITY SERVICES

Healthy communities begin with access to care, and for 70 years, HAS has been committed to meeting families where they are.

Through community health workers, mobile clinics, and preventive care efforts, medical support reaches homes and neighborhoods across the Artibonite region. These programs connect families with the knowledge, care, and follow-up they need to prevent illness and address health concerns early. By investing in people and strengthening community-based care, HAS continues to lay out the groundwork for lasting health and resilience.

HAS works alongside communities to strengthen local capacity through training, education, and environmental initiatives.

During the reporting period, HAS conducted 9 training sessions across 21 communities, engaging 816 participants, including 437 women and 379 men. Completion rates were strong, with all participants finishing the full training cycle.

These efforts were complemented by environmental programming focused on sustainability and food security. HAS supported the production of 149,678 forest seedlings and 12,000 fruit seedlings, along with 31 compost konbites and 25 nursery konbites. Through its central nursery, an additional 85,300 forest seedlings were produced and distributed to support reforestation and community-based agricultural efforts. Together, this work strengthens community resilience and supports long-term health and stability.
